

FLINDERS WASHINGTON INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

SUPERCHARGE YOUR DEGREE – Enrol for work experience on Capitol Hill as part of a Flinders undergraduate or Honours degree

INTRODUCTION

The Flinders Washington Internship programs are unique among the course offerings of Australian Universities.

There are two Washington Internship programs available for Flinders students: An eight week program (the Washington Internship Program – WIP), and a seventeen week program (the Washington Internship Program/Capital Semester Program – WIPCASP) which includes two topics offered by George Mason university: International Economic Policy and American Political Thought.

For the WIPCASP Program see also dcinternships.org

Successful applicants to the WIP and WIPCASP are placed as interns in offices of United States senators and members of the US House of Representatives and on congressional standing committees. The WIPCASP students also attend George Mason University to complete their two topics.

Since its founding year in 2000, the program has sent 122 students to work in the US Congress; this Flinders program represents the greatest presence in Washington achieved by any university outside the United States. Its alumni share the organisers' enthusiasm for the Washington Internship Program as a 'life-changing experience'. Interns return to Australia with a deep knowledge of political life in a global centre of power. This program provides an opportunity to be an Australian 'ambassador' par excellence.

The aim of both programs is to allow students already knowledgeable about American society, politics, history and culture to experience the reality of political life in the central institutions of American national government. The requirements for the programs, and its careful selection procedure, reflect the level of professionalism and knowledge expected of its participants. These are small, selective and highly visible programs. However, any student with motivation and determination who meets the pre-requisites can succeed as a Washington intern.

The programs enjoy the enthusiastic support of the US Embassy in Canberra and the Australian Embassy in Washington, US consulates in Australia and Australian consulates in the US, as well as the South Australian Government.

No amount of news-viewing or textbook reading can match the reality of working in the office of a member of the United States Senate or the House of Representatives, observing at firsthand political decision-making in the United States.

Interns return with a letter from their Congressman or Senator or a senior staff member in their office attesting to their internship performance. That letter will form an important part of the intern's professional resume.

Both WIP and WIPCASP students begin their internships in early January.

AMST3016: Washington Internship Program (9 units)

AMST3016 / XOTH2190A: Combined Washington Internship Program/ Capital Semester Program (13.5 units)

AMST7016: Honours: Washington Internship Program (9 units)

HOW TO APPLY

The Washington Internship programs share the 9-unit core topic at Flinders University: AMST3016 for WIP or WIPCASP undergraduate students or AMST7016 for WIP students enrolled in an honours program.

The WIPCASP is not available for students enrolled in honours programs as a Flinders' honours degree cannot contain externally taught topics.

Students applying to either program must have completed, before they depart for Washington, 18 units of pre-requisite topics.

Admission is by application only and is competitive. Applications are submitted in hard copy and electronically, usually in early August.

Find further information at flinders.edu.au/washington-internship-program

The pre-requisite topics include:

1) AMST2002 American Politics

2) at least two of the following topics:

- POLI1003 An Introduction to Democracy and Government
- AMST1002 America and the World
- HIST2076 The Divided States of America
- AMST3013 The Alliance and the Rise of China

3) one topic chosen from:

- INTR1006 International Relations
- LLAW2212 The Constitution and the Australian Federation; INTR3001 Australian Foreign Policy
- AMST3015 Melbourne Consulate Internship
- GOVT2003 The International Political System.

The prerequisite topic requirement reflects the level of background knowledge required to perform successfully in the Washington Internship programs. Flinders students accepted into one of the Washington programs will be sent to work as political professionals and colleagues in an intense atmosphere of partisan, and bi-partisan, decision-making. A Capitol Hill office is no place for a neophyte in American political life.

 Please contact Professor Don DeBats if you have any queries regarding pre-requisites (don.debats@flinders.edu.au)*

HEAR FROM OUR STUDENTS

The Washington Internship Program gave me an unique opportunity to immensely expand my knowledge of American politics while working in the very heart of the United States' political system. Washington is the place to be if you want to learn how to shape the world, and this opportunity galvanised my interest in further study and travel in the United States.

Jesse Barker Gale (2012, Rep Mike Ross, D-Arkansas)

The experience was life changing, two months was too short! The best way to learn about American politics is to live it. The internship permitted me to make a host of invaluable connections and gain once-in-a-lifetime experiences. I would do it again in a heart beat.

Sarah Flynn (2016, Rep Billy Long, R-Missouri)

The internship program was the biggest highlight of my degree at Flinders. It was an incredible opportunity to participate in the processes of democracy at one of the world's most powerful organisations and also to witness historical events such as Obama's second inauguration.

Nick Mitchell (2013, Rep Blaine Luetkemeyer, R-Missouri)

The two months I spent in Washington D.C. were transformative in more than a purely professional sense - lifelong friends were made as well as a deep love for the city itself. Interning on Capitol Hill is a unique opportunity to network, develop practical skills that compliment your degree in Australia, and learn about the American political system in a hands-on environment s... my only regret was that I could not stay longer.

Sarah Jenkin-Hall (2016, Sen Kirsten Gillibrand, D-New York)

The opportunity to gain international work experience made Flinders a natural choice for me. I undertook the Washington Internship Program which was incredible. I also did an internship with the United States Consulate General in Melbourne last year and found learning about diplomacy really fascinating.

Molly Stephens (2018, Sen Kirsten Gillibrand, D-New York)

Now, as TFAS alumni, and emerging leaders for free societies, it is our responsibility to never forget the legacies of those who came before us, nor lose sight of the responsibilities we have to those who will come after us.

Jack Naismith (Spring 2019 Capital Semester Closing Ceremony)

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is the selection committee looking for?

The internship is a position of trust and significant responsibility. The selection committee takes particular account of the applicant's statement of interest, resume, and letters of recommendation. The committee looks for evidence that you will succeed in the internship - that is, that you are highly committed to it and have the background knowledge and personal attributes and skills necessary to succeed in a congressional office.

Washington works on the basis of information and it is important that anyone applying for the program is well-informed about American politics and political culture. The selection committee will also look for evidence that you will function as a supportive member of the Flinders Internship group, assisting and supporting any member who encounters a problem or difficulty. The committee is interested in how the internship fits in with your career plans and will look for evidence of your relevant experience and maturity.

What will I be doing in Washington?

Successful applicants to the Washington Internship programs work as political professionals. Students applying for admission to the programs list three preferred areas of policy or partisan interest; every effort is made to match student interest with the interest of the offices offering placement. But prospective interns are not permitted to reject placements. The WIP and WIPCASP are about a congressional experience, not about a personal political preference.

Offices of members of the US Senate and the US House of Representatives designate a staff member to be responsible for all interns in that office. Intern supervisors are made aware of the unique features of the Flinders University Washington Internship Program, particularly the requirement to produce a major research paper arising from the internship. The subject of the major paper will be worked out by the intern, Professor DeBats and the intern's congressional office supervisor.

The congressional office intern supervisor sets the daily tasks for the Flinders intern. The goal of the internship is to provide an experience of political life in an influential congressional office and the many tasks, priorities, and pressures of that office. It follows that not all tasks set will be relevant to the major paper, but that is the nature of the internship experience. Interns participating in the programs are urged to remain in close contact with Professor DeBats to ensure that both work assignments and the development of the major paper proceed smoothly. Those accepted into the WIPCASP will receive support from Professor DeBats, Dr. Sarah John, Mr Steve Slattery and TFAS.

Intern Timothy Lopez

PREPARATION

A set of background briefings will be organised for students accepted into the WIP and the WIPCASP, culminating in a formal briefing session late November or early December, to which parents and partners are invited.

This session is a live video conference involving diplomatic representatives of the Australian and United States governments, the South Australian state government, and Flinders University. All organizers are available during this video conference to answer questions from interns, partners and parents.

What will my office expect of me?

Sometimes the tasks assigned to you will be routine and mundane. Much of the success of your internship will depend on how you respond to these situations and what you make of opportunities that arise. You will be expected to show, often quite suddenly, a high standard of initiative, enthusiasm, knowledge and professionalism, as well as a respect for confidentiality.

You will be expected to seek out and take advantage of any professional opportunity available to you. The internship will not be a success if you wait for things to happen or invitations to be extended to you.

Program organisers are available for discussion should, over a significant period, the tasks set not align with the overall objectives of the Washington Internship programs.

You will be expected to be in the office all working days during the internship, and your conduct must at all times be professional, in terms of both dress code and attitude. Punctuality and courtesy are abiding rules of Capitol Hill.

As an intern, you will also be expected to respect all matters of security and confidentiality established by your office.

You must go to Washington fully informed. On Capitol Hill, knowledge is power. This necessity is reflected in the specific topic prerequisites established for participation in the Washington Internship programs.

A meaningful measure of the success of past interns in upholding these standards is that the Australian Embassy in Washington organises a formal reception in honour of the Flinders University interns each year. This type of recognition is vital to the continued success of the program.

Assessment

WIP and WIPCASP students will be engaged full-time in their host office in Washington for the entire period of the internship. WIPCASP students will have reduced time in their congressional office to allow participation in their George Mason University coursework.

While in Washington, both groups of interns will conduct research on a project of interest to their congressional office and to themselves; the resulting 7,000 -8,000 word paper forms the core assessment for the Flinders Internship topic.

This paper makes up 60% of the final grade with preliminary planning assignments contributing 30% of the final grade. When interns return from Washington they will give a formal oral presentation on their experiences in the program. The oral presentation will constitute 10% of the final grade and will be video-recorded.

Mid-Program review

Several review meetings will be held during the internship to progress the major paper and to address any problems which may have arisen.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What do I need to know about preparing my major paper?

It is important to remain focused on the fact that the internship is a university topic and that assessment is as central to this topic as to any other. The excitement of being in Washington as part of this program may be distracting and the Flinders intern needs to retain a focus on the paper. The paper will be assessed in both Washington and at Flinders. A copy of each paper is provided to Congressional Liaison Section of the Australian Embassy in Washington on a confidential basis, and to the South Australian Parliamentary Library as part of the state government placement program for returning WIP interns.

The subject of the major paper will emerge as a result of consultations involving the intern, the supervisor of the student in the host office and Professor Don DeBats. The paper should explore a substantive matter of mutual interest to the intern and the host congressional office.

In preparing the paper, the intern should convey their unique perspective on the research topic provided by the Washington Internship programs. The paper should reflect scholarship and knowledge. It should also make clear how the issue became a matter of importance to the office and how it was dealt with by their member of the House or Senate. Interns will have access to an enormous range of information in Washington including the Congressional Research Service and the Library of Congress.

Students should approach their paper as if it were an honours thesis (albeit on a smaller scale). Examples of successful past papers will be available to the students accepted into the Washington Internship programs.

What Washington offices are available to me?

The selection of Congressional offices varies from year to year because the placements are individually negotiated by the program organisers.

Costs

A good estimate of the minimum cost of the Washington Internship Program is A$11,000 and the combined WIP Capital Semester Program is estimated to cost about A$19,000. These cost estimates vary according to the exchange rate of the Australian dollar.

Currently interns need approximately US$2,500 for their share of accommodation costs while in Washington. Airlines and travel agents can provide estimates of travel costs, but a figure of A$3,000 is a reasonable estimate. Per diem expenses include food, laundry and incidentals and it is prudent to budget at least A$30 per day. Interns will be able to walk to work; public transport should be used for all other travel and car rental is strongly discouraged. The J1 Visa costs approximately A$2,200.

How do I secure financial support?

The organisers actively seek financial support from institutions, companies and organisations for the students involved in the Washington Internship Program.

The Fund for American Studies has generously offered a scholarship of US$6,791 to successful WIPCASP applicants to assist with financing the extended program. This scholarship reduces the TFAS fee to US$7000.

Past interns have been resourceful in approaching local service organisations such as Rotary International, Zonta and Lions to secure individual support for their participation in the Washington Internship programs.

Students accepted into the programs are encouraged to approach employers and unions for support. Many local councils offer leadership bursaries.

OS-HELP is a loan that assists eligible students to undertake some of their study overseas. Students may receive funds for a six-month period for one or two overseas study periods, to assist with a range of expenses. Currently the maximum for the United States is $7,037. See students.flinders.edu.au/finances-and-admin/fees/domestic-student-financial-assistance/os-help-loan-scheme for more details and how to apply.

Visas

Securing the proper documentation for entry into the United States is the responsibility of the students accepted into the Washington Internship programs.

The J1 visa is the required document for students participating in this Program. The organisers work with the American Australian Association (AAA) of New York City in issuing the document for J1 visas. AAA is recognised by the US Department of State for this purpose; AAA will charge a fee to facilitate your visa application. The total J1 visa costs run to approximately A$2,200 (subject to exchange rates), including a trip to Melbourne for an interview at the US Consulate.

Student applications for J1 visas follow the confirmation of the intern placement. However, acceptance into the Washington Internship programs does not guarantee being issued an entry visa by the US government. If your visa application is rejected, you will not be able to participate in the program.

Travel

Students are responsible for the cost of air travel to and from Washington. Flinders University interns are encouraged to fly together to Washington but may travel independently on their return.

Insurance

Medical attention in the US can be extremely expensive. All students participating in the Washington Internship programs must carry full health and accident insurance. As an enrolled student at Flinders University, you will receive free insurance appropriate for the US for the period of your internship.

Accommodation

In recent years the Flinders Washington interns have lived in 'The Congressional' apartment building or in townhouses on Capitol Hill. The Congressional and the townhouses are owned and operated by Washington Intern Student Housing (WISH): internsdc.com/about-wish

Those accepted into the Washington Program must live harmoniously with others involved in the programs. This means, in particular, that overnight guests will not be permitted in the shared accommodation. Rent must be paid in advance and each student is entirely responsible for his or her equal share of the total rent. Find further information at flinders.edu.au/washington-internship-program

Support in Washington

In the event of any difficulty, the initial contact should be with the Program organisers in Washington, Sarah John, Charles Mahtesian and Steve Slattery.

The Flinders University insurance program provides emergency 24 hour phone contacts. The Australian

Embassy located in Washington: Sarah John is always available to assist with any serious incidents.

Further information

The Washington Internships are University topics (AMST3016 or AMST7016) and admission is by application only. Students interested in the programs are advised to contact Professor Don DeBats well before the application deadline in early August.

Professor DeBats can be contacted at: College of Business, Government and Law

THE SELECTION COMMITTEE

Don DeBats

Don DeBats is Professor of American Studies and Politics in the College of Business, Government and Law at Flinders University, and a Visiting Professor at the University of Virginia. He has taught in the Department of Government at the College of William and Mary and has been a Fellow of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the National Humanities Center for the United States and currently Virginia Humanities.

He comments frequently on US politics and policy issues in the Australian and international media and to political and policy groups.

Don completed his PhD and MA degrees in American history and political science at the University of Wisconsin and a BA degree in mathematics at Michigan State University. He teaches American politics and comparative politics at Flinders University. He is the Director of the Jeff Bleich Centre for the US Alliance in Digital Technology, Security and Governance.

Sarah John

Sarah John is a former Washington Internship Program intern who worked on the Almanac of American Politics and now lives and works in Washington D.C. She holds a PhD in American political history from Flinders University. She is Director of the Web Integrity Project for the Sunlight Foundation, a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization in Washington DC that advocates for open government. She previously was the Research Project Coordinator and Data Analyst at Legal Services Corporation, the largest funder of civil legal aid for low-income Americans. Sarah previously served as Research Director at FairVote, a non-profit organisation that advocates for Australian-style preferential voting in America.

Sarah currently has a research position at the University of Virginia and has held teaching and research positions at the University of California, Irvine, California State University, Fullerton, and the University of Adelaide.

Charles Mahtesian

Charles Mahtesian is POLITICO's Senior Politics Editor. He returned to POLITICO in 2015 after two years with America's premier radio news network: National Public Radio (NPR) where he was Politics Editor and Deputy Washington Desk Chief. Prior to that, he served five years directing POLITICO's national political coverage. Charlie has been instrumental in the emergence of POLITICO as an authoritative voice in US political journalism.

Charlie has also served as the Editor of The Almanac of American Politics; the biennial book of Congressional profiles and data which is the indispensable reference for anyone with a serious interest in the US Congress. Earlier he worked as a national correspondent for Governing magazine, covering state legislatures, governors, and big-city politics. He began his career reporting on elections and congressional redistricting for Congressional Quarterly.

Charlie earned his bachelor's degree in politics from Catholic University in Washington DC and his law degree from American University.

Steve Slattery

Steve Slattery is Executive Vice President for The Fund for American Studies (TFAS). In this position, he oversees 12 academic programs that employ 35 faculty members and enrol more than 800 students each year in courses on US politics and economics in Washington, DC, the Czech Republic, Chile, and Hong Kong.

Steve is closely involved with the Congressional placements for the Flinders University Washington Internship Program. Mr Slattery joined The Fund for American Studies in 1992, and previously worked for business and political organisations, including Citizens for a Sound Economy, a national public policy organisation.

He graduated with a BA, cum laude, in economics from Tulane University and obtained an MBA in public policy from George Washington University.

WASHINGTON INTERN PLACEMENT WITH STATE GOVERNMENT

Since 2016, returning Washington Interns have been provided with a 15 day placement in the South Australian State Government. The placement is in a State Government agency with policy responsibilities that approximate the intern's policy experience in the US Congress as reflected in the office responsibilities and the major paper arising from the WIP Program. The placement provides sound professional development for the students and also gives South Australian agencies insight into the similarities and differences in the treatment of policy issues that face both the US Congress and the South Australian State Government.

Placement Schedule

ITEM	DETAILS
Placement Organisation	The Fund for American Studies (TFAS)
Placement Commencement Date	Washington Internship Program – WIP - (8 weeks) commencing January each year. Combined WIP / Capital Semester Program - WIPCASP – (17 weeks) commencing January each year
Placement Completion Date	WIP ends February each year WIPCASP ends May each year
University Course Title and component	AMST3016: Combined Washington Internship Program/Capital Semester Program: WIP/WIPCASP
Placement location and name of Facility	Washington DC: WIP and WIPCASP: Intern in a Congressional Office on Capitol Hill, as assigned to each student WIPCASP: Attend lectures and study at George Mason University, one day per week January - May.
Nature and purpose of the Placement and the work to be undertaken	The Washington Internship programs both offer Congressional Internships. The WIP runs for 8 weeks and students return in late February/early March; the WIPCASP offers an opportunity for students to extend their internship for a semester workload under the Capital Semester Program managed by The Fund for American Studies. The Capital Semester Program will require the student to take 2 topics (International Economic Policy and American Political Thought) with George Mason University (one day a week attendance required) while continuing their Internship in a Congressional Office on Capitol Hill for the other four days of the week. The combination of the WIP and Capital Semester Program contributes to a semester workload under the Australian Higher Education regulations and will be reflected on the student transcript. Students will receive a George Mason University transcript with their grade in the two topics; those topics will display on the Flinders transcript as 4.5 units of granted credit. Student tasks while interning under both Programs range from answering phones, conducting tours, attending briefings and congressional sessions on behalf of the Office, to writing briefing papers and networking with constituents and Congressional staff in Washington DC and the District or State. Tasks for the 17 week program include the above, as well as attending private site briefings at key Washington institutions and attending professional development seminars; WIPCASP students are assigned a professional mentor and offer advice on career development. The WIPCASP students will also attend George Mason University to complete International Economic Policy and American Political Thought. These topics plus the 9 unit Flinders Internship Topic (AMST3016) constitute a 13.5 unit full time semester workload.
Evaluation of Student Performance method	Students will comply with George Mason University (GMU) assessment criteria for the 2 topics they attend at GMU, and TFAS code of conduct. Flinders University will continue to assess the assessment for the AMST3016/AMST7016 topic. Together, Flinders and TFAS, will measure evaluation and performance based on individual attitude, cooperation, collaboration, time management and goodwill during their internship and placement. This is achieved through own observation, internship office reports and evaluation, regular meetings with the student, behaviour at shared housing facilities and GMU faculty.
Project	All WIP and WIPCASP students are required to complete a 7,000 word assignment to be handed in at the end of Semester 1. Flinders University staff will assess the written and oral work associated with AMST016/AMST7016. GMU staff will determine the assessment for International Economic Policy and American Political Thought and will assess and grade the work in those topics.
Special Conditions	The WIP Selection panel (2 Flinders nominees, 1 TFAS nominee and 2 independent nominees) will nominate the students based on their written application, GPA and referees. Students must meet US State Department J1 visa conditions, sponsored by the American Australian Association (AAA). AAA has confirmed Flinders has 6 places available for the WIP and 4 places available for the combined WIPCASP.
